REVENUE DEPARTMENT.

Circular No. 8774-81, dated 12—19th February 1908.

In inviting attention to Government Proceedings No. R. 3938-47—L. R. 201-07-2, dated 27th December 1907, sanctioning the temporary grant of select patches of village gomal for sowing gram, etc., and approving of the Rules proposed therefor, the undersigned requests the Deputy Commissioners and their subordinate officers to give wide publicity to these rules and to induce villagers to avail themselves largely of the opportunity thereby afforded for raising additional crops and improving at the same time the village gomal. The endeavours made by the taluk and village officers and the result thereof should be referred to in the Jamabandi reports.

Rules for the temporary grant of select patches of gomal land for gram cultivation :—

1. Whenever the whole body of raiyats in a village agree to take up a portion of their gomal land for temporary cultivation, they may apply for the same through the patel or recognised headman.
2. The application should be prepared in the form annexed and the shanbhog must fill up the particulars required at the instance of the raiyats.
3. The application should be presented before the Amildar in person by the villagers or their representative. The Amildar will at once verify the facts contained in the application and submit the application with his recommendation for the orders of the Sub-Division Officer. The assessment leviable should also be proposed, based on the average assessment on dry land in the neighbourhood.
4. The Sub-Division Officer will scrutinise the application without delay and, if there is no objection, order the grant of the land, fixing the assessment to be recovered.
5. On receipt of orders, the Amildar will grant a temporary Saguvali chit in the name of the recognised representative of the villagers who will be liable to pay the assessment imposed thereon.

Provided that where there is not sufficient time for the previous observance of these formalities, the villagers may proceed to occupy and plough the land after presenting the application to the shanbhog and patel for immediate despatch to the taluk on the express condition to be stated in the application that they will abide by the orders of the Sub-Division Officer on their application.

6. The villagers must arrange among themselves for apportioning the area granted for cultivation and the recognised representative may collect the proportionate assessment from the raiyats.

7. Before the crop is harvested, the assessment imposed under Rule 4 should be paid up to Government and the Amildar shall have the power to prohibit the removal of the crop before payment of assessment.

In case of default, the crop may be sold by him, the sale being reported to the Sub-Division Officer within seven days from the date of such sale for confirmation. When the sale is confirmed, the excess amount realised, if any, over the assessment due, may be made over after notice to the villagers, to their representative. Should there be a deficiency, the amount of assessment still due may be ordered to be remitted by the Deputy Commissioner.

In sanctioning the grant, the following rules must be strictly adhered to:—

(a) The area of land granted for cultivation in any particular year should lie fallow during the next two years. This can be conveniently arranged by dividing the whole gomal of a village into three distinct plots and granting one plot each year so that by rotation each plot will be brought under cultivation every third year.

(b) The crop to be sown must invariably be confined to gram.

(c) Cultivation should on no account be allowed where it would lead to the destruction of scrub jungles or seedlings of trees.
